AT the present moment, when China is concluding new conventions with foreign countries giving liberty to her subjects to emigrate. when she has just obtained a subsidy from the Hawaiian Government for the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company to maintain a regular line between Honolulu and Canton, it is interesting to learn how Chinese subjects abroad are faring. A great deal has been said and written concerning the bad treatment they are alleged to have received in Peru and Cuba, and there was no doubt. good ground for some of the statements. given to the world a few years ago, though at the same time we have very good reason were guilty of gross and wilful exaggeration Now, however, that treaties have been concluded with Spain and Peru, and Consuls-General appointed to Havana and Lima, we may hope to hear no more of these stories of bad treatment of the Chinese. In another column we republish to-day, from a Shanghai contemporary, an extract from a letter received by Grand Secretary Li Hung-chang from His Excellency CHEN LAN-PIN, the Chinese Minister at Madrid, which gives some dition of the Chinese in Cuba. A number of hand engines were soon on the spot and several Editor, not for publication, but as evidence of good | hose playing on the fire. The Insurance Comanies' fire engine quickly followed and led a good stream of water up from a couple of hy. drants in Queen's road. The new Government ire engine, of which mention was made at the recent Council meeting, was also stationed in Queen's-road, but broke down almost immediately. In the meantime the two large Government engines had been got down on the Praya and sent a good supply of water up from the harbour. The house in which the fire broke out was one of the flimsy structures which cover that district, and the flames, fed by the large quantity of wood used in their construction, spread along the street and barst out in two other houses and damaged a fourth before the fire was got under. A party of Marines from the Victor Emmuel was landed to assist in proserving order, while a number of blue jackets from the same vessel and the Moorhes rendered good service in pulling down the walls when the fire was got under. The engines began to leave the seene soon after five o'clock, but several hose were kept playing on the smouldering débris during the evening in order to prevent a fresh

The Chamber of Commerce have published the tables of the imports and exports of the port of saigon for the six first months of the present year. The general imports in 1880 for the above nentioned period amount to $4,092,925, against $3,998.723 for the corresponding period of 1879 and the exports to $884,285, against $590,468 for 1879. The export of rice and paddy amounts to 1.396,643 piculs against 3,987,673 piculs in 1879 and that therefore to her is due their success. The total value of the imports and exports of the port of Saigon from 1st January to 30th June, politan Graduate in the year 1847 Li Hung-chang

1880. was $10,630,250.— The Government have invited for December next, tenders for first, a monthly service to Tonquin and vice versa; senond, a fortnightly service with Singapore in conjunction with the English mail. The twelve trips to Tongoin yearly would give a run of 19,920 miles and the 26 trips per year to Singapore and back would give 83.124 miles, in all 17,681 leagues. The fixed subsidy. proposed by the Government is 20 frames per engue, or 353,620 francs per year, not including Government passengers and cargo, which would have a fair tariff. According to estimates made out, the Singapore line will not bring much in this respect, but the Tonquin line would. The steamers required by Government for these services ought to be of at least 500 tons burden and months to mourn in his native place, and he conmodation for 1st, 2nd, and 3rd class passengers

Government passengers and cargo will pay a fair tariff. The best paying line in the river service will undoubtedly be the Cambodia line, but should the railway to Pnompenh be voted by the new Colonial Council and the line open in four years' time, I smafraid that Cambodia this time until the suppression of the Nien-fei would not give enough freight to keep both gomy last, I told you that our proposed railway is double the amount perhaps for construction, but

THE GRAND SECRETARY LI

Although much has lately been done by foreigners acquainted with Chinese to bring all that is interesting in the "dill dreary desert" of Chinese literature within the reach of Western readers, and much to help new-comers in the study It will doubtless be remembered that on the of the language, modern biography and contemporary history have been somewhat neglocted. The same nice discrimination of the relative value of knowledge which makes a school boy in England get the labours of Horoules by heart, but tries to keep him ignorant of the existings of Mr. Gladstone, has supplied the student of Chinese with full accounts of Fan-ku, the first man, but left him in the dark as to matters more recent and reliable The study of modern biography and family history in China, although not perhaps inviting ment, and would be particularly interesting in its bearing on heredity. The following sketch of the career of the Grand Secretary Li may be of interest, in view of passing events, to those who have not been long . enough in China to remember the facts which it records, and may perhaps suggest the production offullerandabler papers on recent events in China. In Hung-chang was born in the year 1823. His father, Li Wen-ngan was a native of Ho-fei district in Lin-chon fu, in the province of Ngan buei. He came of a family during several generations distinguished for literary attainments. and was himself a Fellow of the College of Lite. rature (Han Lin Yuan). He was stationed in the capital for many years, serving in the Board of Punishments, and afterwards as Director of the Banqueting Court. Before the breaking out of the Tai-ping Rebellion, Li Wen-ngan had

On that occasion, according to the Shenpao, besides presents direct from the court, she received a scroll from her friends in which her virtues are set forth in glowing terms. A mongst er other good deeds it recounts that while her husband was employed in the Board of Punish. ments she stinted herself that she might be able to give clothes to the prisoners in winter, and thereby saved many lives; and that during the ebellion she urged her sons not to allow care for her to keep them from fighting for their country,

During the allied campaign in 1860, Li had the good fortune to escape employment which would have put him in apposition to Western Arms ; had he been so employed his subsequent career might have been very different, for the rigorous responsibility which attaches of office in in China, extending to matters over which the official can have no control, has brought Chinese officers opposed to foreigners in the field to almost certain disgrace. In April 1862 Li was acting Governor of Kinng. su, and on the Srd December, 1862, he was anpointed Governor. THE ROBERTSON DIVORCE CASE.

James Hannes had again before him the remarkgrossa. The petition is that of the husband, her dissolution of the marriage by reason of the "alleged infidelity of his wife with Count Oscar Favngrossa, an Italian.

Mrs. Robertsou, the respondent, gave evidence. She said that at the time she made the acquaintance of her husband she was living with another gentleman as his wife. The petitioner believed that she was married to this gentleman. There was no children of the marriage. They went to Hongkong Hotel Company's Shares-$68 per Japan, and lived together on very affectionate terms. It was not true that she went to a bachelors' party, for other ladies were there. Owing to witnessing a severe storm in Japan her health China Sugar Refining Company (Debentures)became much affected, and she was hysterical and excitable, and sometimes gave way to fits Chinese Imperial Leau of 1874-(Nominal). of temper. She denied that she was addicted to | Chinese Imperial Loan of 1877-(Nominal). intemperance. On one occasion her husband beat her with a stick. When returning from a dinner party she complained of a plain in her side and sat down on a low sea-wall. Her husband was very angry with her and wanted ber to return home. He pushed her and said, "Go to the devil." and she fell over into the sea. He resound her An American gentleman came up and threatened to blow the petitioner's brains out. In the presence of Sir Brooks Robertson, her father inlaw, she charged her husband with throwing her into the water. The quarrel was afterwards made ap. There was no agreed separation. When they came to England her husband wrote her a num. ber of affectionate letters. He left her in lodgings in Margaret-street, and kissed her, giving her-£20. She had no idea that was his final separation... She afterwards traced her husband to the Charing-cross Hotel, and asked him for an explanation. He made no charge whatever against her, but stated that he intended to leave her. She declined to sign my deed of separation. She was very much distressed at ber husband leaving her in that way. While living in Margaret-street she tried to poison berself and to shoot herself. The people at the house interposed, and a nurse was engaged to watch her. Subsequently she went to Italy, and took lodgings at the house of Contesse Favagrossa, who kept a boarding house. At Bergamo she went to the fair, and from the house of Court Oscar Favagrossa they could have a good view. On one occasion, while dining at a restaurant, Count Favagressa became "a little gay," and repeated some objectionable poetry to her, at which she took offeres, and she threatened to throw some water over him. It was not true that the corespondent ever heat her. She was as strong as he was, so that it was not likely he would beat her. She denied that she ever misconducted borself with Count Favagressa.

Some other evidence was then called in ennport of the respondent's statements. The President delivered judgment on the 3rd August. Dealing first with the counter-charges alleged in her answer by Mrs. Robertson against her husband, the petitioner, he held that she had failed to establish either of them. Sho alleged that her husband had been guilty of cruelty. One of the instances given by her was that he had used a horse-whip towards her while living in Japan. The charge was denied by the petitioner, and the respondent had adduced no corroboration of her statement. She further alleged that on a particular occasion he throw her into the sea. This was, in effect, a charge of attempted murder on his part, but, though they remained in Japan for some time afterwards, no such charge was preferred against him; and it
